

English is the Global Language

With a Power Point presentation, Mr. McMillan examines the origins of today's English language and how the language evolved from the invasion of Britain by Germanic Tribes in the 5th Century A.D. through the Norman invasion in 1066 A.D.

The presentation also covers the modernization of English through the period 1500 A.D. to 1800 A.D. In addition, he reviews English today and looks at the use of English throughout the world.

As with all of his presentations, Mr. McMillan details facts along with a measure of good humor. Finally, he explains that the presentation is not to put down the learning of another language. In today's global economy, it is important that we do learn about other important world languages. But, he makes it clear that English is the dominant language in every part of the world today with computers clearly adding to the attraction to English.
